FOOD PRODUCTS CO. DECIDES TO ERECT A PLANT

George J. Kelly and Fred G. Taylor, who constituted the committee appointed by the local directors of the Food Products company to go to Oregon to inspect the properties of the Oregon company, with a view to taking them over, have just returned and made their report.

Their investigation has been entirely satisfactory, insofar as the general purposes of the company are concerned, and, while some modifications of the original proposition were necessary in order to get together, they are unstinted in their praise for the "ever-fresh" products which are produced under this new process.

They report the process to be simple, effective and economical, and have reports from many influential people in Portland, including general passenger and traffic managers of two railroads, stewards of several hotels and managers of delicatessen shops, that highly recommend the ever-fresh products in their various lines.

The committee's report has been accepted by the local directors, the articles of incorporation have been ordered filed, the factory site has been decided on, and work will begin at once, and by the opening of the mid-summer fruit season, Ogden will have another flourishing factory as a monument to its thrift and industry and contributing to its already vast payrolls and to the advantage of its fruit growers and farmers.

This new factory is not to be thought of as the average evaporator or drying plant. It is an entirely new process, known as the "dehydrating" process, which extracts moisture from fruit and vegetables in a very gradual manner, without rupturing or distorting the original cells of the substance, and the dried substance so treated can simply be soaked in water and brought back to its original shape and flavor in the most amazing manner.

The ever-fresh line is already well established in some localities, and from the present outlook it will revolutionize certain phases of the fruit and vegetable packing business. Just think of being able to take enough of the new processed fruits and vegetables on a pack horse to last you for a summer's tramp through the mountains, being able to restore them to their original freshness and flavor by the simple addition of water, thus eliminating the necessity of transporting canned stuff with its great plus of moisture and bulk for such uses.

These products are already in the market in Ogden, at the various grocery stores. They are all sold under the label of "ever-fresh," with full directions for preparation.

The usual loyalty of Ogden people to support their home industries can naturally be expected to support this new enterprise, and we bespeak its popularity and success from the outset.

The prize is in the pictures at The Ogden always.

CHOIR RECEIVES GIFT OF $2500 FROM THE CHURCH

The exposition trip fund of the Ogden Tabernacle choir has been appreciably added to by the gift of $2500 from the Mormon church, according to a statement made last night.

The contribution was made through the first presidency of the church, and the announcement followed a recent meeting of that official body with Willard Sowercroft and Joseph Ballantyne of the choir. At the meeting, the members of the presidency expressed a desire to assist the Ogden singers, but the degree of assistance that might be possible could not be determined at that time.

DAVID F. HOUSTON, SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE, ENTERTAINED

Head of the Department, of Which the Forest Service Is a Branch, Visits Local Headquarters of District Forester Kneipp—Welcomed by the Weber Club—Guest at a Banquet—Sees Ogden and Surrounding Country.

David F. Houston, secretary of the United States Department of Agriculture, arrived in Ogden at noon today from Salt Lake City, accompanied by Francis G. Caffey, solicitor of the department, Associate Forester A. F. Potter and District Forester F. L. Kneipp.

The secretary and party passed through Ogden late last night, from the northwest, and was met at the union depot by Mr. Kneipp. The distinguished visitors were met at the depot on their arrival in Ogden today by Mayor A. G. Fell and Hon. Fred J. Kiesel, and taken to the Weber club, which represented the city as host to the party during the fore part of the afternoon, the later hours being passed in an inspection of the local forest service headquarters.

At the Weber club, the visitors were entertained at an elaborate luncheon, being seated at specially arranged tables with about twenty prominent local business and professional men. Brief informal addresses were made by several of the local men whose interests have been prominently connected with agriculture, and a few remarks were also made by Secretary Houston and Messrs. Potter and Caffey, during the serving of the later courses of the luncheon.

President W. H. Wattis of the Weber club, who departed for Washington, D. C., yesterday, expressed his regrets at not being able to be present to meet Secretary Houston at the luncheon, in the following telegram to I. L. Reynolds, secretary of the club, which was read:

Message From W. H. Wattis.

"I, L. Reynolds, secretary Weber club, Ogden, Utah—Please express to Secretary Houston my personal regret for inability to be present and meet him. As president of the Weber club I advise you that in my judgment Mr. Houston represents the particular department of our government which concerns most vitally resources and industries which organization is striving to protect and promote. Nothing should be left unsaid or untold which will assure our distinguished guest of our friendship and our desire to co-operate completely with him in the splendid activities of his department. Say to him that we are proud to have as citizens the members of the forest service, and that we are a fair sample of the workers who would like to have the entire agricultural department transferred at once from Washington to Ogden."

(Signed) "W. H. WATTIS."

Hearty applause followed the reading of the telegram, being evidence that the sentiments expressed by President Wattis were in accord with those of the local community as a whole with regard to its appreciation of the establishment of the district forestry headquarters here.

The following telegram from John A. Whitsoe, president of the State Agricultural college, was also read:

"Logan, Utah, May 26. Mr. I. L. Reynolds, secretary Weber club, Ogden, Utah—Missed train by accident. Automobile road in the agricultural college. Please express to Secretary Houston high appreciation by Utah college of his labors in behalf of agriculture."

(Signed) "JOHN A. WIDTSOE."

President Whitsoe had been invited to be present at the luncheon, as one vitally interested in agricultural matters, and also because of the fact that Secretary Houston was formerly president of the State Agricultural college of Texas, which conditions would have made a meeting between the two one of mutual pleasure.

After luncheon, the visiting government officials were taken on an automobile ride through Ogden canyon to the site of the municipal wells, and on their return made a trip of inspection to the Davis and Weber county canal, through the agricultural districts to the north of the city. They were much surprised, pleased and interested in everything that they saw, the trip to Secretary Houston in particular being one of continual surprises, as today marked his first visit to Ogden.

Extent of Forest Service.

In an interview, shortly after his arrival in Ogden, Secretary Houston stated that the purpose of his trip, which he is just concluding was to visit the national forests, to inspect the forest service in the offices and in the field. His object was also to meet the employees of the department and to see the working of the service machinery in its relation to the communities in and near which it is being operated. The national forests, he said, cover approximately 160,000,000 acres of land and more than one-half of the 3,000 employees of the forestry department are employed in the field, 1,500 of them being forest rangers.

In the trip through the forests of New Mexico, the Pacific coast states, Montana, Idaho and Utah, the secretary continued, he had been much pleased to find an excellent spirit of co-operation between the employees of the department and the people of the different communities. In fact, he said, the forest rangers, being the only representatives of the federal government seen in many localities, are not only looked to by the people for advice with regard to matters concerning the forests, but on many other problems in which the interests of the people and the government are jointly concerned.

It was also his object, to get a first hand view of the larger problems which the department had to deal with in Washington. Some of these were with regard to timber sales and operations, the preservation of the forests, by protecting them against fire which was considered of great importance, and for the protection of forest growth to retard the flow of water and to preserve it for municipal uses and irrigation. The question of reforestation, too, he stated, was of much importance and this was to be solved both by protection of the present growth and also by planting.

Grazing of Livestock.

Speaking further, he said that the question of grazing in the national forests was one of great importance, and at the present time, special grazing permits covering 1,600,000 horses and cattle and 7,800,000 sheep are now in effect. This is an increase of nearly 50 per cent since the government took over the control of grazing in the forests and the forest service department has found that by adjusting kinds of animals to particular forests and at proper times of year, the larger number can be maintained and the grazing improved. This is made possible by the opening up of trails and by the protection of the animals against poisonous plants and predatory animals.

"This improved system having been worked out so advantageously, Secretary Houston continued, it is clear that if public lands were as well handled, it could increase the number of cattle, horses and sheep, by 50 or 60 percent within a few years and some legislation is needed in that respect."

The question of the use of the water in the forests for the development of power was also discussed by Mr. Houston and concerning it he said that 42 percent of the water flow in the United States is in the forests. At the present time, the government is allowing water companies to operate under special permits, to supply power for different purposes, including those of municipal usage. That the permits are of great value is evidenced by the fact that at the present time, where companies are operating plants that supply power for industries at different kinds of values at from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000, they are planning to increase them to cover industries that will reach a total value of from $60,000,000 to $80,000,000.

In view of this condition, the department is now favoring a measure which will give a 50-year lease to water power development companies, under certain conditions that are covered in a bill that the department of the interior is now concerned with.

The Ogden District.

The district of which Ogden is the headquarters is considered by the department as one of the most important, especially from the point of water power and grazing. It is the second largest, from the point of view of the number of cattle that graze upon it and first with regard to the number of sheep.

In concluding the interview, Mr. Houston said that the department was not only building roads and trails in the forest preserves, but that schools were also being built and that the relation of the forests to problems of irrigation were also being closely studied. His present trip had occupied a month's time and, with his associates, he had visited forests where conditions typical of all and the methods of combating them were to be found and in operation.

This was his first visit to Utah, he said, and he was pleased to note a splendid development along lines of irrigation and industry, which evidenced a spirit of co-operation, the prerequisite to progress.

The party was scheduled to depart for the east this evening over the Union Pacific.

MADISON AVENUE IS TO BE PAVED WITH

ASPHALT

The city board of commissioners this morning authorized the city engineer to publish notice to contractors for the paving of Madison avenue, between Twenty-fifth and Twenty-eighth streets. It is specified that the paving shall be of asphaltum two inches thick on a 6-inch concrete base.

In connection with the paving, it was also ordered that the city engineer should extend to a point north where it can be connected with an outlet adequate to control the flood waters of the Bench residence districts of the city.

The engineer was also directed to advertise for bids for the construction of sidewalk on Lafayette avenue, between Twenty-sixth and Twenty-seventh streets.

The petition for curb and gutter improvement on Twenty-first street, between Jefferson and Madison avenue, was referred to the city engineer for computation.

E. J. RICHARDSON IS BOUND OVER TO DISTRICT COURT

E. J. Richardson, known in police circles as "Razor Jack," was bound over to the district court this morning by Municipal Judge Reeder on the charge of receiving stolen property. The prosecution was conducted by County Attorney Joseph E. Evans and the witnesses for the state were David W. Evans, Charles Baldwin, Mrs. Alice Chandler, J. H. F. Last and David Rosenthal. Mr. Evans identified a suitcase and a set of furs that figured in the case as the stolen property. Mrs. Chandler testified to seeing the goods in the possession of the defendant and Rosenthal testified of having purchased the furs from Richardson.

The defendant claimed to have only assisted Baldwin, who was bound over to the district court yesterday on the charge of having stolen the suitcase and furs, to sell the furs and argued that he was not guilty of the charge stated in the complaint.

Eugene Young pleaded guilty to a charge of drunkenness and given a $5 or 5-day sentence. Ollie H. Rollin pleaded not guilty to a charge of petit larceny and his trial was set for Friday morning.

The case of W. D. Brown company against the Southern Pacific company, which was to have been tried before Judge J. A. Howell today, has been continued for the term. The suit was instituted to recover damages for loss of wheat in a shipment from Reno, Nevada, to the Riverside mills in Ogden, December 5, 1913. The plaintiff claims that of 104,752 pounds of wheat shipped, 37,772 pounds were lost, to the plaintiff's damage in the sum of $424.39.

In the case of the Liberty Irrigation company against W. Bailey, Judge J. A. Howell today gave judgment for $466.20, the plaintiff to pay one-third of it and the defendant two-thirds. This is the amount that the court determined was due David McKay and William M. Bostaph, who previously acted as water masters.

The case of Calvary, et al, against H. H. Butler, et al, was again taken up for trial in Judge N. J. Harris' division of the district court today. The question at issue between the parties is that of priority of right to the use of the waters of Mill creek for irrigation purposes.

RETURNS FROM A SAD MISSION

H. L. Bell, assistant superintendent of the Salt Lake division of the Southern Pacific, returned today from Kansas City. His trip east was in company with Asst. Supt. George R. Geiger, who was taking the body of Mrs. Geiger to Greenville, Texas, for interment. Mrs. Geiger died at Imlay, Nev., about a week ago.

Mr. Geiger expected to remain at Greenville a number of days before returning to Utah.

Widows and Orphans' Money

A few days ago we collected five thousand six hundred nineteen dollars and forty-three cents for Mrs. Anna Brostrom and her children. In appreciation of our work she wrote us the following testimonial letter. READ IT. It shows what can be done.

Ogden City, Utah.
May 19, 1915.

The Merchants' Protective Association, Scientific Collectors of Honest Claims, Francis G. Luke, General Manager, Salt Lake City, Utah.

Gentlemen:

On behalf of myself and my minor children, I want to thank you sincerely for the excellent results obtained for me in recovering $5619.43 from the company for the death of my husband.

In view of the fact that before I employed you the company had induced me and all of my little children to sign a release for $300.00 and made it appear to me that this was like a donation and that they were not in any way liable, you certainly accomplished wonders in obtaining this large sum of money.

I will gladly recommend you to all my friends who may be in need of such services.

Yours very truly,

MRS. ANNA BROSTROM,
524 Seventh Street,
Ogden, Utah.

Mrs. Brostrom and her children were advised by a lawyer to sign the release and settle her claim against the company for the said sum of $300.00. She afterwards got to thinking and concluded that she had been imposed upon and employed us to investigate the case for her. Several of her friends told her we could not collect any money for her; that she had given a receipt in full and that settled it. Others told her that even should we succeed in getting the money for her, it would be kept in court so long and so many difficulties would arise she would never get any of the money, anyhow—but here we are with over $5000.00 for her.

It is these indisputable cold facts that have justified our friends all over the west in boosting for us.

This is the second nice bunch of money we have collected for widows in Weber county. Some time ago we collected $5013.35 for Mary Ann Frew of Syracuse, Weber county, Utah. About six weeks ago, we collected fifteen hundred dollars for Joseph G. Shephard of Thistle, Utah. All of those three items were personal injury actions against companies for damages.

We collect all kinds of honest claims, big or small. We will collect some money for you if you will turn in your claims.

WHEAT PRICES ARE SLASHED 7 CENTS

Chicago, May 26.—Free selling of wheat resulted today from the news that the American steamer Nebraska had been torpedoed. Nearly seven cents a bushel was slashed from the price of May wheat. That option, which closed last night at $1.55 3/4, sold today to $1.48 7/8 with last transactions at $1.50 1/4, a net loss of 5 1/2 c. In the end July and September were respectively 2 1/8 and 1 1/2 c down from last night's level.
